

Nijinsky Dances, Maintaining His Big Reputation

By Sylvester Rawling.

WARSLAV NIJINSKY, the Russian male dancer much talked about and long expected, made his debut with the Ballet Russe at the Metropolitan Opera House yesterday afternoon. He justified his fame and was rewarded with something like an ovation. It was in "La Spectre de la Rose," with which he is familiar, that he first appeared. By diligent rehearsal he had transformed the production into a poetic creation of great beauty. His own dancing of the Rose was a dream of grace, litheness and suppleness, his muscles flexible as if made of rubber, he leaped and pirouetted with astonishing lightness. Crossing the stage at full speed, he dropped instantaneously, extending himself at full length at the feet of the sleeping girl, making everybody gasp. Lydia Lopokova, as the girl was inspired by him to new enchantments. The lighting of the stage was vastly improved. The orchestra, under the direction of M. Ansermet, did better justice to Weber's "Invitation to the Dance"—all to the credit of M. Nijinsky. Later, appearing in the name part of "Petrouchka," which essentially is pantomime, his superiority over his predecessor was not so marked.

John Brown, the Comptroller of the Metropolitan Opera Company, announced from the stage before the dancing began a rearrangement of the programme, caused by the temporary indisposition of Flore Revalles who was cast for Zobeide, in "Scheherazade." He did not explain the cause. It was learned afterward that, upon entering the theatre, Miss Revalles had received a letter which, as she opened it, scattered a white powder over her, blinding her and frightening her into something like a faint. No other harm was done. Miss Revalles showed no trace of indisposition when she appeared. This digression, or diversion, or call it what you will, served to give point to the numerous stories of dissensions and jealousies aroused in the company by the appearance of M. Nijinsky. One tale was that the latter had forbidden M. Diaghileff, the manager, to be present behind the scenes while he was dancing. Some of the gossip was incredible. "Thamar," another novelty, was introduced at the evening performance. The scene is laid in a huge tent, one of the best bits of setting and decoration that Mr. Bakst has shown us. The dancing is to music by Balakireff. The story is like that of "Coppelia." For a few minutes of dalliance with Thamar, travelling Prince drinks of a poisoned cup and dies, his body being thrown out of a window into a river. The principal dancers were Flore Revalles and Adolph Bolm, who, together with the company, acquitted themselves well.

Tom Dobson gave another of his intimate song recitals at the Funch and Judy Theatre yesterday afternoon. His voice is inconsiderable, but his interpretations of songs, as he sits at the piano and plays his own accompaniments, are artistic and fetching. His spell, once put upon you, holds. His programme held groups of German, French and English songs, among the latter, of course, several of his own composing.

TYRONE POWER IN NEW FILM.

Sensational "Where Are My Children?" at Globe Theatre.

Tyrone Power in a new sensational film, "Where Are My Children?" will follow Pavlova at the Globe Theatre on Monday next. The production is made by Louis Weber and Phillip Smalley from a story for the Universal Film Company.

Tyrone Power plays the leading role, and Helen Hains and Marie Walcamp appear in the picture. The story written about a universally discussed subject was witnessed by a delegation of ministers and physicians. A review of the picture will be given by The Evening World next week.

MYSTERIOUS.

Counts taken on the East River bridges seem to show that every day 11,358 people go to Brooklyn and apparently never come back.

Rheumatism!

How is rheumatism recognized? Some have said—

- Rheumatism is a dull pain.
- Rheumatism is a sharp pain.
- Rheumatism is sore muscles.
- Rheumatism is stiff joints.
- Rheumatism is a shifting pain.

All have declared—Rheumatism is Pain.

Sloan's Liniment applied:—

Especially Valuable After Grippe because it speedily overcomes that terrible weakness and lassitude gripe leaves behind. The ingredients of Wincarnis have been recommended by the medical profession for many years. Its formula is not concealed. Wincarnis is an unvarying combination of beef from prize cattle of English breed, malt from choice ripe grains, and a specially selected wine possessing unusual tonic properties. The wine is a mild stimulant, a tonic and a blood-builder. The malt is a powerful restorative and vitalizer. The beef is a highly concentrated tissue builder. These three ingredients are combined by a scientific process which greatly enhances their individual health-giving qualities.

There are no drugs in Wincarnis. You will find it pleasant to take, easy to digest and as delicious as the finest beverage. Wincarnis has been famous in Europe for a third of a century. Thousands have testified that it has restored them to health and strength. Don't confuse it with the many inferior preparations of apparently similar nature. Accept no substitutes. Buy Wincarnis itself, the tonic that has been successfully imitated for 33 years.
